

still affects the lives of many Native American people today;

Whereas many Native American people are still suffering from and trying to comprehend and cope with direct trauma, including impacts on health and well-being, and the intergenerational trauma, that resulted from losing connection to family, culture, language, religion, and heritage;

Whereas significant research shows that adverse childhood experiences, such as the experiences of many Native American children who attended Indian boarding schools and the descendants of those children, can cause numerous negative health outcomes, increased suicide rates, and other harmful outcomes throughout life; and

Whereas recognition that healing and promotion of care for the mind, body, and spirit is essential to overcoming the dark shadows on United States history cast by Federal Indian assimilationist policies and practices carried out by the Federal Government through Indian boarding schools and acknowledging the lived experiences of the Native American children and families who endured and continue to endure the trauma and grief associated with Indian boarding schools: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

(1) it is the sense of Congress that there should be a national day of remembrance for the Native American children who died while attending a United States Indian boarding school;

(2) Congress recognizes, honors, and supports the survivors and the families and communities of children who attended such schools; and

(3) Congress encourages the people of the United States—

(A) to support and recognize the grief, pain, and hardship many Native American people suffered and still endure as a result of the assimilationist policies and practices carried out by the United States through Indian boarding school policies;

(B) to honor the legacy of and remember those who were lost or harmed by those policies and practices; and

(C) to appreciate the resilience of the survivors and their families with appropriate ceremonies, programs, events, and other activities to support and commemorate a national day of remembrance.
